

Intimate Partner Sexual Violence

About this course

In this self-paced course you will learn about the intersection of sexual violence in intimate partner relationships. Sexual violence is one of many forms of violence that can occur in intimate partner relationships, yet our systems, training and ways of understanding these issues are easily separated. Knowing how sexual and intimate partner violence (or domestic violence) intersect is paramount in broadening and understanding how we address all forms of gender-based violence. This course was developed in collaboration with the Ontario Coalition of Rape Crisis Centres and the Violence Against Women Learning Network.

You will learn

1. How sexual violence and domestic violence intersect
2. How to respond to disclosures of intimate partner sexual violence while working with diverse women
3. How to conduct intake and safety planning for intimate partner sexual violence.

After completion you will be able to

1. Identify different forms of sexual violence in abusive relationships
2. Have an awareness of ways in which sexual violence -- and support options for survivors -- can impact different populations of women in different ways
3. Talk to survivors of violence about different forms of sexual violence that may be occurring in their relationships
4. Offer support, referrals and information to those experiencing sexual violence in their relationships
5. Be able to provide safety planning for those experiencing sexual violence in their relationships.

How do I register?

To gain access to this course, please register with the Training Hub to set up your free account by visiting training.oaith.ca.

