

Risk Assessment and Safety Planning with Infants, Children and Youth

About this course

This self-paced course explores the various elements involved in including risk assessment and safety planning when working with infants, children and youth. Content expertise is provided by Dr. Angelique Jenny. The course includes scenarios, quizzes and required readings to support your learning and knowledge development to better support and include infants, children and youth in risk assessment and safety planning practice.

You will learn

1. What we currently know about Risk Assessment and Safety Planning with Infants, Children and Youth and why it is important.
2. To Identify Risk and Protective Factors for Children Exposed to Gender-Based Violence in their homes.
3. To understand how child development impacts on the process of safety planning and how best to involve them.

After completion you will be able to

1. Identify risk and protective factors when creating safety plans with children and their families.
2. Take child development factors into account when assessing for risk and planning for safety.
3. Consider the application of risk assessment and safety planning principles using a Case Study example.

How do I register?

To gain access to this course, please register with the Training Hub to set up your free account by visiting training.oaith.ca.

